Weekly Update - February 10, 2014

Greetings! It has been a while since we've had a lot of new info to share, but it has been busy behind the scenes and over the next couple of weeks there will be a series of Weekly Blasts to explain some updates relevant to our 2014-2015 Academic cycle planning and to the HSC's planning for the upcoming SACS visit.

First and foremost, our web page has been updated – please check it out! You will still navigate to it in the usual way. A URL is included on this and every Weekly Blast, but you can also select the "Academic Information" tab from the right column of the SOP home page. You can still access the same information from this page as before, but we hope the links are organized in a way that is easier to navigate. We've also included more "public face" information including general descriptions of our curriculum and a bibliography of citations published or presented as either "Scholarship FROM teaching" or Scholarship OF teaching". Citations we will strive to maintain on this list include publications or abstract / poster presentations that:

- Are the product of a student / faculty collaboration (whether this be from Special Topics independent study collaborations, clinical research rotations, grant supported "scholars collaborations" or even just informal collaborations)
- Describe any innovation in teaching published or presented by our faculty, resident instructors, or both

If you would like to see one of your citations added to this list, please send it to me and Linda Gilmore.

Stay tuned... next week I want to introduce a series of formatting changes in our SOP course catalogue and explain how they came about and what they mean (note, these are not curricular changes). There will also be reports regarding the initial roll out of reports generated from Ilios data, as well as progress with annual CAC activities, such as syllabi and Post course reviews. We've been busy!!
