Faculty from the TTU College of Media and Communication with research expertise on health-related issues will showcase their work and discuss examples of how they can partner with TTUHSC staff and faculty on both applied and basic research projects. Sample projects include improving research communication to journals and granting agencies, enhancing communication efficiency among medical personnel, persuading and informing patients about health interventions and testing the effectiveness of health campaigns.

Who should attend? Faculty, postdocs, students, fellows, residents, anyone interested in improving communication with granting agencies, journals, and patients.
