Perry School of Nursing Faculty Member Selected for National Committee

Wrennah L. Gabbert, Ph.D., R.N., associate professor with the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center Anita Thigpen Perry School of Nursing, was recently chosen to serve on the National Association of Pediatric Nurse Practitioners (NAPNAP) Continuing Education Review Committee.

The committee is responsible for reviewing continuing education applications from pediatric nurse practitioners and providing evaluation comments to the NAPNAP national office. As a committee member, Gabbert will serve a three-year term.

“We are proud that Dr. Gabbert has the opportunity to help meet the continuing education needs of pediatric nurse practitioners across the country,” said Chandice Covington, Ph.D., R.N., interim dean of the Perry School of Nursing.

Gabbert has been a peer reviewer and author for Sigma Theta Tau International’s Online Case Study Publications since 2000. She has also been a manuscript review panel member for the Journal of the American Academy of Nurse Practitioners and an editorial review board member for the International Journal of Human Caring since 2009.

With approximately 7,000 members, NAPNAP is the professional association for pediatric nurse practitioners and other advanced practice nurses who care for children. The association advocates for children's health by providing funding, education, and research opportunities to pediatric nurse practitioners; influencing legislation that affects maternal/child health care; and producing and distributing educational materials to parents and families.
