Every living thing on earth needs water. From the tiniest micro-organisms to the massive blue whale, none can survive without some form of water.

But now, this most precious and ubiquitous of resources is in danger of becoming an exclusive club as demand for water explodes, driven by the growing human population.

This film, Lords of Water, investigates this financialization of water. Featuring interviews with investors, environmental and business experts, and those affected by water scarcity, it examines the struggle between those who wish to treat water as raw material and those who wish to preserve it as a resource open to all.
