

OPENING SPACE: AAPI VOICES

Via Zoom (Register Here)

Opening Space is a Zoom-based series, co-hosted by the TTUHSC Office of Global Health and the TTU Vernacular Music Center, that elevates unheard voices and emphasizes representation, agency, empowerment, and inclusion. The series seeks to create opportunity for dialogues by and among underrepresented groups, acknowledging sources of silencing and affirming our shared connections.

Join us in May as we highlight Asian American and Pacific Islanders' voices with panelists Chris Esperat, Professor in the TTUHSC School of Nursing; Tiva Kasemsri, Associate Professor in the TTUHSC School of Medicine; Yuan Shu, Associate Professor of English in the TTU College of Arts and Sciences; and Sangmi Yoo, Professor in the TTU School of Art.

The event will promote conversation among individuals – students, faculty, staff, and community partners – who specialize in the arts, humanities, and STEM topics, and who situate themselves within underrepresented identities. By sharing a dialog between and across their fields of expertise and experience, we highlight the bridges and points of connection between and among our campus community members.

THIS EVENT IS FREE AND OPEN TO THE PUBLIC.
